Patrick Morgan’s clarinet playing has been praised by The Washington Post as “riveting” and “...a mystical experience.” He has been performing in the Washington, D.C. area since 2008. He attended Indiana University’s Jacobs School of Music, where he was a student of Howard Klug. Patrick accepted a position with the United States Marine Band and Chamber Orchestra at the age of 22. He was appointed Assistant Principal Clarinet in 2012 and has been the Principal Clarinet since 2015. As a teacher, he has given masterclasses at prestigious universities across the country including Indiana University, the Eastman School of Music and Baylor University. He is also a freelance music copyist, preparing music for publication for a number of publishers. He has worked on materials for notable composers such as William Bolcom and David Maslanka. In his spare time, Patrick enjoys coffee, cooking and woodworking with hand tools. He lives in Springfield, Virginia with his wife and two children.
